

A Historical Introduction to Photography AR 113

Unlike traditional introductory photo courses, this one will proceed through the application of a variety of processes that trace the medium's history. From the making of cameraless photographs using the cyanotype process popular in the mid-nineteenth century, to the creation and use of pinhole cameras, students will have an opportunity to explore the excitement and alchemy of the simplest methods and materials.